Kenana Knitters

Susan Wamari joined Kenana Knitters in 2004 as a knitter on the general floor. She came to Kenana after the birth of her daughter Vivian. She was looking for a working environment where she could have her child at work.

Over the years Susan has been a very diligent worker. In 2009 she became a fulltime employee of Kenana Knitters. Currently she is in charge of Wool Processing. She is responsible for the treatment and dyeing of the handspun wool.

Susan enjoys her work at Kenana. She especially loves knitting the small spider lions.

‘I am grateful for Kenana Knitters. The company has helped myself and other women by giving us an opportunity to work. I have been able to raise my six children and educate them to secondary school.’
